Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 22 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Many areas fine today but some rain in northwest later.

Today:
Early rain in parts of southern England clearing but cloud taking longer; windy towards Kent. Many other areas seeing some pleasantly warm sunshine after chilly start. Parts of northwest UK turning cloudier and windier with some rain and drizzle later.

Tonight:
Southern areas fine and chilly with clear spells and odd mist patch. Northern areas milder but with thicker cloud and some rain and drizzle, particularly for western hills and coasts.

Wednesday:
Cloud and patchy rain and drizzle across northwest UK spreading to some other northern and western areas, keeping it cool. Warmer and sunnier across much of the east and south.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Fine for most on Thursday. Rain across the northwest pushes slowly southeast, then turns increasingly showery through Friday. Showers probably confined to the south by Saturday, with dry conditions elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.